

DEVON DOWSERS
International Dowsing Day 5 May 2019
A Celebration at Cadbury Castle

A happy band of 14 of gathered on a surprisingly chilly Cadbury Castle to celebrate International Dowsing Day – and Hamish Miller's birthday.

The main focus of the day was to plot the centerline and width of the Michael Line which runs across the top of this Iron Age hillfort. We then sang and danced on the line and then re-plotted where the edges of the Michael Line were and found that the line had expanded around where we had danced from around 6 metres to a massive 21 metres in width! We were aware that other dowsing groups such as Trencom Dowsers were working on the line too and that the apparent beneficial effect on Michael was a joint effort!

After picnicking amongst (and some dowsing the auras of) the bluebells, we then split up to find the Roman 'treasure' well, talk to the resident dragons (there are four, some 7000 years old!), find pictograms and healing spots, locate elementals, commune with the trees and dowse for history on the hill.

A bonus for us was the appearance of Richard Dealler who researched and developed the Mary Michael Pilgrims' Way pilgrimage route following the Mary and Michael lines based on Hamish Miller and Paul Broadhurst's book 'The Sun and the Serpent'.

Cadbury is a very special place with its bluebell covered ramparts, circle of fine trees and astounding views across to Dartmoor and Exmoor. We will return!
